

Core Concept

You are lost in a cursed underground cavern where faint glowing spirits (“kajos”) guide your path. Some want to help you escape. Others want you to stay forever.

You can only move forward by choosing which light to follow.

Player Goal

Escape the cave.

Core Mechanics

- Each passage presents shimmering lights
- Each light represents a choice/path
- No clear “correct” answer
- Choices influence:
 - Sanity
 - Direction (escape vs deeper)
 - What truths do you uncover

Interest Curve / Story Circle

1. You (Normal World)

You wake up in darkness. Only faint shimmering lights exist.

2. Need (Call to Action)

You must follow the lights to survive.

3. Go (Crossing Threshold)

You choose your first light.

4. Search (Exploration)

Different lights reveal:

- Whispers
- Memories
- Lies

5. Find (Midpoint Twist)

You realize:

Some lights are not guiding you out

They are trapped souls luring you

6. Take (Consequences)

You begin losing a sense of reality:

- Paths loop
- Text becomes distorted
- The lights contradict each other

7. Return (Climax)

Final choice:

- Trust a dim, weak light
- Or a strong, beautiful one

8. Change (Ending)

Multiple endings based on trust and choices.

Characters (The Lights)

Each “kajo” is actually a character:

The Gentle Glow	The Bright Flame	The Fading Light
Soft, flickering Speaks kindly Usually safer paths	Strong, confident Pushes you forward aggressively Risky, manipulative	Weak, barely visible Knows the truth Leads to the real escape (hard to trust)

Exposition (How the story is told)

- Whispered dialogue from the lights
- Environmental text:
 - “The walls breathe softly...”
- Memory fragments triggered by certain paths

No info dumps, everything is discovered.

Indirect Control

- The player doesn’t control outcomes directly
- Lights influence the player
- System tracks hidden variables like:
 - Trust
 - Doubt
 - Corruption

Then endings depend on values.

Endings (Keeping it 2–3)

Escape Ending (Good)

You follow the faint light > reach the surface > dawn breaks

Lost Forever (Bad)

You trust the wrong lights > loop endlessly

Become a Light (Dark Ending)

Visual Style - Twine CSS

Typefaces

Crimson Text is used for body text. A serif font that reads as literary and slightly aged, fitting the tone of the narrative. Italics are reserved for the voices of the lights, separating them visually from the narrator.

Special Elite is used for choices and titles. A typewriter-style font that echoes the story's motif of scratched writing and messages left behind.

Summary

The palette is warm throughout except for the cool choice links. The visual intent is simple: comfort belongs to the cave, and agency feels different from it.
